WARNER AGAIN FREE.

Pulaski Leeds' Slayer Escapes From the Asylum.

Borrowed Another Patient's Clothes to Aid Him in His Dash For Liberty.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Oct. 23.—Geo. Warner, the slayer of Pulaski Leeds, former master mechanic of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, escaped from his room in the Western Kentucky asylum, near this city, some time during the night, by forcing the lock and a great iron plate of his door, and is still at large.

Warner made his escape some time after the night watch went on at 9:30 o'clock, but his escape was not discovered until 4:45 o'clock this morning so ingeniously had he covered up all indications of his absence. As soon as his departure became known the officials of the asylum were aroused and in a short time communication was opened with every point in the surrounding country in hopes of capturing the fugitive.

Warner was confined in the violent ward for safe-keeping, for although he had been a model patient, and had been allowed many privileges, the authorities were unwilling to take any chances of his escape and placed him where they thought he would be unable to get away if he was so disposed, and in addition kept him constantly under guard in the daytime whenever he was allowed to leave the asylum building.

It is the custom at the institution for the patients as soon as they retire for the night to hang up their clothes on the outside of their cells or wards that the Guard, in making his rounds, may know that the patient is in bed. In order to prevent detection Warner succeeded in borrowing the clothes of one of the patients in another ward and hung them outside his door. Hence when the guard passed his room he supposed everything was all right.

Warner succeeded, by use of a wire, in picking the lock of his door and then forced the iron plate which is used as a further protection against any attempt of patients to break out. He then, it is supposed, made his way to the basement, carefully avoiding the guards, and was soon out in the open. It is not thought that he could have taken a train out of town, as careful inquiry at the Illinois Central and Louisville and Nashville station revealed no trace of the missing man.

The generally accepted theory is that he struck straight out through the country, making his way across fields to some station where he could take a train which would carry him to Tennessee.

FARMERS RALLY.

At the Ohio County Fair Grounds
On Saturday, November
4th, 1905.

The farmers rally at the Ohio County Fair grounds on Saturday November 4th promises to be a most enjoyable and largely attended as well as profitable meeting.

Hon. E. L. Davenport, of Muhlenburg, county will deliver a public lecture and will be able to explain in detail the work of the national farmers convention which met at Owensboro last week. Mr. Davenport is quite a pleasant and entertaining speaker and is sure to have something of interest to say to the farmers. He is a close student of the labor question and knows and can explain the need of organization among the farming class of people.

Quite an enjoyable feature of the day will be the old fashion basket dinner which will be served on the grounds.

The Committee on arrangements have issued a public invitation for every body to attend.

Narrows A. S. of E. News.

Fordsville Local Union No. 2 received 12 more members last Saturday night. This makes 32 additions in the last three weeks. The people are becoming thoroughly aroused and the farmer who is yet out side the organization is beginning to feel like a sheep at a shooting match.

Line up fellow farmers and quit dumping your products on the market for less than equity. prices, for herein lies your only real prospects for future prosperity.

Now that the great National Convention of Tobacco Growers has done its work and a plan has been adopted by which tobacco growers can control the marketing of their crops and thereby compel profitable prices and realizing that final success depends only upon united action among producers therefore we should do our utmost to help extend and solidify the organization.

Seeing as every one must that unorganized we are entirely at the mercy of the trusts and combines, why not as men of convictions and having the courage characteristic of real american manhood come at once to the point and join with us in our demands for simple justice.

Remember the time is close at hand when our doors will be closed against you and you will be left out with the trusts and the Devil to fight it out.

This applies to locals already organized.

Remember this is the time for positive action choose you this day whom you will serve, your families or the trusts locals prepare both Banners and dinner for the great rally to be held at the fair grounds at Hartford Nov. 4 tell every body to come and hear the able address to be made on that day.

NEW RAILROAD

From Madisonville to Cloverport via Hartford Almost a Certainty.

In a recent interview—I. Bailey who has just purchased a large body of coal land at Bremen Muhlenberg county which the proposed road will traverse says:

"In regard to the railroad from Madisonville to Cloverport or to a point on the Ohio river near that place, will say that I have no doubt whatever about the road being completed. Certainly my purchase would indicate that I had great faith in the railroad being built. I will say this, that I have been in communication with the parties who will furnish the capital to build this road, and they have said emphatically to me that the railroad would be built and equipped in first class shape just as soon as the people of Madisonville or Hopkins county would assure them that the right-of-way would be furnished them without cost. This as you know was the original agreement, and while it is true that up to this time not all of the right-of-way has been secured, still I have faith in the people who own lands over which this railroad will pass, and feel confident that when their attention is brought to the matter in the proper way that they will be glad to give the right-of-way without any cost.

Pumpkins.

Mr. John T. Norris, a resident of Davess county, has grown the longest pumpkin vine that was ever heard of, and in has half a wagon load of pumpkins on it says the Owensboro Inquirer. The plant came up in a potato patch on Mr. Norris' place, and never had any cultivation whatever, as it appeared after he had quit working the potatoes. In company with Mr. Chas. Nuttall, a neighbor, and Mr. Simon Jackson, of Evansville, he measured the vine which came from one seed and found the total length to be 1,566 feet and eight inches. It had twenty-seven ripe pumpkins, all weighing from twenty-three to thirty pounds, the whole weighing 675 pounds. Besides there were nine green pumpkins of various sizes.

PELVIC CATARRH

MRS. MINNIE E. McALLISTER.

She Suffered For Years and Doctors Failed to Give Relief—Cured by Pe-ru-na.

MRS. MINNIE E. McALLISTER, wife of Judge McAllister of Minneapolis, Minn., and Chaplain Loyal, Mystic Legion of America, writes:

"I suffered for years with a pain in the small of my back and right side. It interfered often with my domestic and social duties and I never supposed that I would be cured, as the doctor's medicine did not seem to help me any."

"Fortunately a member of our Order advised me to try Peruna and gave it such high praise that I decided to try it. Although I started in with little faith, I felt so much better in a week that I felt encouraged."

"I took it faithfully for seven weeks and am happy indeed to be able to say that I am entirely cured. Words fail to express my gratitude. Perfect health once more is the best thing I could wish for, and thanks to Peruna I enjoy that now."—Minnie E. McAllister.

Mrs. Esther M. Milner, DeGraff, Ohio, writes:

"I was a terrible sufferer from female weakness and had the headache continuously. I was not able to do my housework for myself and husband. I wrote you and described my condition as near as possible. You recommended Peruna. I took four bottles and was completely cured. I think Peruna a wonderful medicine."—Mrs. Esther M. Milner.

Congressman Thad. M. Mahon, of Chambersburg, Pa., writes:

"I take pleasure in commending your Peruna as a substantial tonic and a good catarrh remedy."—T. M. Mahon.

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotics of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peruna does not produce temporary results. It is permanent in its effect.

As a tonic and nerve invigorator Peruna has no equal.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for twenty years. Such a thing could not be possible if Peruna contained any drugs of a narcotic nature.

TRAIN BACKS TWO MILES.

Only to Get a Hat of a negro Passenger.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 24.—A funny incident was witnessed by the passengers of the E. and I passenger train which arrived in Evansville yesterday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock.

When the train was a short distance this side of Mackey station an excited passenger made his way to Conductor William Smith and said a man had fallen from the train and that he had seen him as he made the plunge. Conductor Smith had the train backed up and after going about two miles a man's hat was found but no man. Inquiry developed that the hat belonged to a negro passenger and he received his property with many thanks, although he had not thought of asking that the train be backed to find the hat.

Killed at Rockport.

Man, Dick Porter, a young colored man, died in the lockup at Rockport last Friday from the effect of wounds inflicted by pistol shots fired by Cleve Herrel the day before.

It was reported that Porter and Herrel were in front of Jarnigans saloon. The negro was drinking and struck at Herrel, who is a boy of about twenty years old, blacking his eye, Herrel then ran out of the saloon into a restaurant, next door and secured a .38 caliber revolver. Returning he opened fire as soon as he came into the house, Porter fell on the floor and was later taken to the lockup, there being no other place to take him, Herrel surrendered next morning and was later released on bond. Saturday morning Esq. D. J. Wilcox, in the absence of coroner, summoned a jury and held an inquest. The jury after hearing all the evidence, returned a verdict of the effect that Herrel acted in self defense.

STRANGE CASE

Of a Man Who Served Twenty-Seven Years in Jail for Drunkenness.

[Waterbury (Conn.) Dispatch.]

Judge Edgar M. Warner, of Putnam, who is well known as an advocate of prison reform, and has long waged war against the Connecticut system of punishment for petty offenses, now believes he has discovered the finest specimen of the "horrible example" that ever served a reformer's cause.

The "horrible example" is a prisoner now in the New Haven county Jail, where he has spent no less than 27 years and the most serious offense he ever committed was that of getting drunk, with never so simple a frill as an assault or a bit of "pan-handling."

Neither Judge Warner nor Sheriff Dunham will make known the name of the prisoner. They say he is the dissolute son of a family of more than state prominence; that his relatives long ago cast him off, and that he himself in his sober moments wishes to be regarded as dead.

"The least we can do for the poor devil is to keep his secret," said the Sheriff this afternoon.

"He is only a poor victim of the law," said Judge Warner, "why should I tell you his name?"

The man was first committed in May, 1878. He had been on a protracted debauch in New Haven and entered the jail half-intoxicated. He served ten days and was discharged. In twenty-four hours he was back again with a sentence of three months. That tells his life story.

In all these past 27 years the man has never been free from the jail for more than 12 hours at a time. Usually he gets no further away than the little saloon a few yards distant from the jail entrance. Sometimes he makes a long journey to the center of the city. Once he stayed sober long enough to ship as a deck hand aboard a coal barge, but they called the patrol wagon before the tow got under way.

His shortest sentence was for the original 10 days. His longest has been four months. He has been committed 161 times and the state has extended more than $10,000 for his trials and his support. He is to be discharged in less than a month.

"We'll let him go in the morning and have him back before night," said Sheriff Dunham.

Judge Warner will bring the man's case before the National Prison Association. According to the Judge a sentence of 120 days is only long enough for the development of a consuming thirst in a hard drinker. He wants the laws so changed that the habitual drunkards may be committed for one or two years.

Frightful Suffering Relieved.

Suffering frightfully from the violent poisons of undigested food C. G. Grayson, of Lula, Miss., took Dr. King's New Life Pills. "With the result," he writes, "that I was cured." All stomach and bowel disorders give way to their tonic, laxative. 25c at Z. Wayne Griffin & Bros., drug store guaranteed.

Caught a Cannon Ball.

The veterans smoking comfortably sat around the fire in harmony.

The strangest sight I ever saw, one said, "was the blocking of a cannon ball. It was at Chickamauga. A spent ball came skating through the air, like a baseball thrown pretty swift, and a brave Irish sapper next to me said: 'Watch me block this.' He held his spade straight, like a cricket bat, and received the ball full and true. Its course wasn't deflected. It climbed straight up the spade and took off the young soldiers' head."

A Car For Drunkards.

The most effective rebuke to drunken men lies in the refusal of sober persons to associate with them. The last man in the world to willingly associate with his own class is the drunkard. The worst seasoned criminal may be proud of his vicious associations and boast of his criminal achievements. Harlots congenially herd together.

But the drunkard is ashamed of his own class. He will not be classified as a drunkard if he can help it. If he can help it by no other means he may even go to the extreme of ceasing to get drunk.

Railroads running out of London have put on a series of trains known as drunkards' expresses, in which intoxicated persons are carried, to the great relief of the traveling public generally and also to the greater convenience and safety of the drunkards themselves.

But the drunkard does not like to be herded and labeled, and it is said that men who used to go home drunk every night now dodge the obnoxious classification by going home sober.

On every railroad where drunken men ride the special car should be provided for them. It is but proper protection to decent persons who wish and have a right to ride in peace.

The drunkards' car would never be crowded. Men will remain sober rather than to cut off from decent order-loving persons and thrust in with drunkards.

For even the drunken men detest and loathe a drunkard.

A Daredevil Ride

Physicians were helpless, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly healed it." Soothes and heals burns like magic. 25c at Z. Wayne Griffin & Bros., druggists.

TRAINED ROOSTER

Can do Many Surprising Feats and is at Feud With a Dog.

[Kansas City Star.]

Lynn S. Banks, General Ticket Agent at the Union Depot, is a "natural born" trainer. Had not nature endowed him also with a proclivity for "railroading" he would really have "made good" on some vaudeville circuit in a trained animal act. Mr. Banks has never educated a grasshopper to turn back somersaults or taught a goldfish how to roll over and play dead, but has given a big Plymouth Rock rooster accomplishment that very few other roosters can boast of. "E. Tochising Puff" is the dignified name with which Mr. Banks has endowed this bird, and in truth E. Tochising bears himself in a manner quite worthy of this high-sounding appellation.

E. Tochising's expression is always intelligent. When spoken to he makes a rumbling noise is throat and cocks his head on one side in much the same manner as the fox terrier dog in the phonograph advertisement. He has been taught to call for his food and can always gain admission to the house by pecking on the back door. He will jump over a stick when invited to do so often, when his master is sitting on the front porch, leaps into his lap and "nestles up" like a kitten.

The bane of E. Tochising's existence is Mark. Mark is a dog—just an ordinary dog. Perhaps some one of his ancestors, away back, was a full-blooded fox terror, for there is an indefinite something about Mark which suggests the fox terrier, family. But his general appearance indicates that the majority of his forebears were just "yellow dogs." However Mr. Banks doesn't claim that Mark was "bred in the purple." He does declare, though, that the dog is one of the smartest canines of the present age.

Enmity of the deadliest kind exists between E. Tochising Puff and Mack. Each is jealous of the other's accomplishments and each resents strenuously any endearments showered on the other. A real battle between them might result in the discomfiture of E. Tochising, for Mack is a strong dog and E. Tochising is only a rooster. Great vigilance is necessary to keep them apart. In the meantime Mr. Banks is pining for a rattlesnake. A trained rattlesnake would make his collection a very novel one.

MYSTERIOUS VOICE.

Induced Passenger To Leave a Train and Save His Life.

[Duluth Herald.]

Ghost stories and presentiments were the subjects of conversation in the lobby of the Lenox Hotel one evening recently. Several stories, humorous and otherwise, were told. D. M. Baker, of Minneapolis, related a queer experience he met with in the West several years ago, while traveling with a party of friends on a Denver and Rio Grande train.

"I am not at all superstitious, and as a general thing I place little confidence in tales about spirits of the departed said Mr. Baker. "Neither did I place any confidence in presentiment until the event I am about to tell you about occurred."

"There were several of us on our way to the Pacific Coast. On the night in question we had berths in the same car. We occupied our time during the evening in the usual way of passengers on an overland train, smoking, chatting and playing cards. As the night advanced the party grew smaller, as one by one, the fellows went to bed. I retired a little before 11 o'clock, and it wasn't long before I was sound asleep."

"About 2 o'clock in the morning I awoke with a start. A voice seemed to be calling me. 'Get off the train,' it said. I rubbed my eyes, and while I was trying to figure out just where I was the voice repeated the words, telling me to get off the train. I was really in a dazed condition, and only half awake. Just then the train began to move. It had stopped for a minute at a station."

"Hardly realizing what I did, I grabbed my clothes, ran to the end of the car and jumped into the depot platform. When I came to my senses the lights of the train were disappearing around a bend. No building was in sight, aside from the depot. There a light was shining from the window. I entered and surprised the operator with my strange appearance, for, of course, I had no time to dress. I told him just how I came to be there, and then laughed with him at my own foolishness."

"He pointed out a cot, and for a second time that night I went to bed. Before morning a report came over the wire to the effect that the train I had left had run into a washout 20 miles farther on and had been badly wrecked. Every person in the car I deserted was more or less injured, and five were killed. It is not for me to explain the thing. Maybe it was a dream and maybe it wasn't. Anyway, I wasn't in the wreck. To me that is the most interesting part of the story."

Do You Want Strength?

If you want to increase your strength you must add to and not take from the physical. In other words, the food that you eat must be digested, assimilated and appropriated by the nerves, blood and tissues before being expelled from the physical. It gives strength to and builds up strength in human system. It is pleasant to the taste and palatable, and the only one combination of digestants that will digest the food and enable the system to appropriate all of its health and strength giving qualities. Tights For Judges.

[Holton (Kan.) Signal.]

It is proposed to put Mother Hubbards on the Judges of the Supreme Court. Here's hoping that the Judges will not fall victims to so fool a scheme. The country long ago outgrew gowns for mens, sword, wigs and knee pants. The Mother Hubbard suggestion is ridiculous and its adoption would cheapen the Court. The public requires that a Judge shall know the law, be honest in expounding it, and conducted himself as a gentlemen. The flub-dubbery of an English Court is not wanted here. If the Judges feel that they must tog up for their work let them wear tights and at least be original.

DOG'S BONE

Grafted on to Leg of Injured Man Saved the Member.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Grafting the bone from a dog's leg on to the leg of a man, to replace some five inches of bone that had been removed and so saving to the man his leg, was the remarkable surgical feat performed by a local surgeon. It was the first recorded case of grafting upon the human bone, the bone of one of the lower animals. The patient, a Swede, 45 years old, had fallen about 12 feet to the pavement, causing a compound fracture right leg near the ankle. The fracture, the resisted treatment, and in the course time five inches of the were removed. It seemed that the only thing left was amputation. The surgeon determined to attempt to graft the bone from the foreleg of a dog to the sawed-off end of the leg bone of the man. A small black-and-tan dog was selected for the experiment, placed under ether, and his leg prepared. The ends of the bones of the man and the dog were united by silver wire and the dog and man fastened rigidly together in a plaster cast. The report says: "The man suffered very much pain or inconvenience except for two or three days, during which the dog was restless and would attempt to move. The more the dog would move the more pain was inflicted, not only upon the dog but upon the man. The dog soon realized this so that it was not necessary after the fourth day to give the dog morphine to keep him quiet. The dog and the man become very much attached to each other." Five weeks later the bones had knitted firmly and the dog was removed by sawing off his leg. The other end of the bone was united to the man's bone without difficulty. Six months after the union the thin bone from the dog had grown and developed almost to the size of the origin bone in the man's leg. The man walks, with a cane, but can get along without it if necessary.

MAN AND WOMAN

Have Lived Together for Forty-Two Years Without Speaking.

[New York World.]

On a seventy-five-acre farm, four miles from Chateaugay, Franklin county, N. Y., dwelt James and Mary Durney, brother and sister, who, although they have lived in the same house since childhood and are the only occupants of the house, have not spoken to each other for 42 years.

James is 60 years old and Mary 55. Their uncommunicativeness has for two score years been one of the wonders of that part of Franklin county and the fact that, otherwise, they appear to get a long together amicably, has but served to intensify interest in the case.

What further adds to the interest of the situation is that neither brother nor sister every says a derogatory word of the other to any one.

Yet the cause of the period of 42 years of silence toward each other is one of the traditions of neighbors. When Mary Durney was 13 year old she wanted to go to a party in the village of Chateaugay, and her brother, five years older, declared that she should not; that she was too young to go to parties.

The girl tried to slip out of the house, but her brother caught and detained her and refused to permit her to leave the sitting room of their home until the last vehicle had departed with its merry load of youthful farmer folks. As the sounds of the wheels of the last carriage died away Mary was seized with frantic grief and passion and struggled desperately to open the door that her brother had locked, putting the key in his pocket. He sat back and laughed at his little sister's vain efforts to open the door. She struggled to force the lock and then pounded frantically on the door, until, exhausted by her efforts and her impotent rage, she fell on the floor. She lay there for hours, refusing to move, and shrieking when her brother tried to get her to rise.

When the girl arose the next day

she refused to speak to or notice her brother, and this is the attitude that she has maintained resolutely, through good fortune and bad, through deaths in the family, through success and business enterprises that comes to them, through the sickness or health of both of them.

Her brother, quick to take a cue, and apparently feeling as angry as she, after a few abortive attempts, ceased to speak to her when he received no answer to his remarks. And from that day, 42 years ago on October 11, these two persons, dwelling together, have locked their lips against each other.

BELIEVED TO BE DEAD

Taylor Goff Returns a Wealthy Man--Was Partner of Stratton.

[Brockenridge News.]

Believed to be dead for twenty years, Taylor Goff, who left Cloverport in 1867 at the age of twenty-five, returned here last Thursday from Grand Junction, Col., to visit his brother, Chas. Goff, of Tarfork, his nephew, Eugene Goff, of this city, and other relatives. When he went to Colorado he had little means. For twenty-five years or more he has engaged successfully in the mining and real estate business in that and other western states and his wealth now runs easily into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. He owns several gold and silver mines and other valuable property a Grand Junction and other points but will not return there, on account of failing health, going instead to Los Angeles, Cal., to engage in the real estate business.

Mr. Goff prospected for years with the late William Stratton, founder and owner of Independence mine, Colorado, the richest gold mine in the world, and was his partner in an iron mine. When Stratton died last year he was worth $13,000,000.

In 1858, Mr. Goff returned to Cloverport for a short visit and seven years later for a brief period. For twenty years after his return to Colorado, his relatives here did not receive any word from him and through that he was dead. In recent years only did they hear from him. During part of this time he was in Australia, China and other countries in the far east. He started to make two visits here that accidents prevented. One time, by an explosion of dynamite, his leg was broken and his eyes so badly burned that he could not see for eleven months, and not then until an operation was performed. At another time, the wooden part of a car was demolished in an accident and his face was penetrated and disfigured by many long splinters.

Mr. Goff married a daughter of ex-Governor Sherwood, of Oregon. He has no children and his wife is not living, and he has offered a home in California to every one of his relatives in this state, among whom are Mrs. W. D. Waters, a niece, and Wm. Goff, a nephew, both residing at Owensboro. Some of them will accept the offer.

Cheated Death.

Kidney trouble often ends fatally, but by choosing the right medicine E. H. Wolfe, of Bear Grove, Iowa, cheated death. He says: "Two years ago I had Kidney Trouble, which caused me great pain, suffering and anxiety, but I took Electric Bitters, which effected a complete cure. I have also found them of great benefit in general debility and never trouble, and keep them constantly on hand, since, as I find they have no equal." Z. Wayne Griffin & Bros., druggists, guarantee them at 50c.

Back to My Boyhood Home.

There are people in Ohio and other counties who have been born and reared on the banks or within a close distance of old Rough river and have never imagined that there were old pioneer homes and other places of interest along its banks that were fairly glowing with rustic beauty and poetry, but such is the case. Along its banks are the old pioneer homes of our forefathers; old and maybe gone to decay, but having such histories that they are overflowing with interest.

There was one old home near the place called Ross' Ripple about two or three miles from Centertown, at which the Downs family lived, and where L. P. Downs was born. This old place has been changed a great deal since Mr. Downs left it forty years ago when a child, but yet it is an interesting spot, for him at least. Some time last spring he was going up Rough and coming to this old place he stopped to wander over the place of his happy boyhood days. The old buildings and other places he had known and loved so well were gone and new ones in their places, but still there were a few old familiar places that brought back to his memory the happy days of childhood. All these things affected him greatly and he went away with a sad heart. When he returned to his home at Livermore he told of visiting the old place and it so affected his son, Roscoe, that he sat to work and in a short time wrote a poem about it which he gave the title of, "Back To My Boyhood Home." Roscoe Downs has been engaged in literary work for the past year, but without success until this poem, which has been pronounced by the critics to be good. Since writing it he has had it set to music and made a beautiful song of it which has just been published by the Success Music Co., of Chicago and is having a good sale and promises to become a great favorite. This should be of interest to the people of this section of the country, for anything that is written about home and places that we are familiar with is always more interesting than something of which we know nothing, therefore we should be willing to assist in making this song a success. The author has had it dedicated to his father, L. P. Downs, and wishes it to be a success more for his sake than for his own. It will be placed on sale at Hartford, Centertown, Rockport, and other towns in Ohio county as soon as possible and will be sold at a reasonable price. Let every one purchase a copy when placed on sale to enjoy the sweet music and words and help honor the old Rough river we all know so well. If any one wishes a copy and can not secure one, just address the author at Livermore, Ky.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Had By a Boy Who Was Carried Away By a Flock of Pigeons.

[Lesueur (Minn.) Dispatch.]

There was an exciting time in New Prague, in this county, yesterday over the danger that a small boy named Willie Zghrisch was in for nearly an hour of meeting with a violent death. This little boy, the son of Moloch X. Zghrisch is 12 years of age, but very small and athletic, and quiet inclined to be mischievous. His father is a pigeon fancier with a fad for the powerful flyers called "homing pigeons," and the boy, knowing how well the birds could fly, got two of his little companions to assist him and caught a large number of the birds, which he had confined overnight in their cage, and fastened to the legs of each bird a cord about 20 feet in length. The free end of the cords he carried out of the closed window of the dove cote and tied them all together outside.

When he had 45 of the birds harnessed in this way he took the knotted ends of the cords firmly in his grasp with both hands and then directed his companions to open the window and free the pigeon. As soon as this was done the birds flew out with a rush and, with their combined strength carried the venture some little lad far up into the air above the city, and there they flew about with him, to and fro but still too frightened to alight and thus release the boy. He hung on for dear life, twining his fingers in the straining cords and below him in the city, as the birds flew this way and that, the excited people ran, with shrill cries of alarm, wondering what they could do to help the boy and fearing every moment that his strength would give out and he would fall at their feet.

Finally Brzcyck Q. Lrosch, a farmer who lives a mile from town, and who had seen the wonderful sight from afar, came riding swiftly into town and using his trusty Krag-Jorgensen rifle with that wonderful marksmanship for which he is noted all about New Prague, killed the frightened pigeons, one by one, till the flock was so weakened by this loss in its numbers that they could not sustain the boy's weight and slowly and gently dropped him into the Remes artificial lake from which he was easily rescued.

Last Hope Vanished.

When leading physicians said that W. M. Smithart, of Pekin, La., had incurable consumption, his last hope vanished; but Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, kept him out his grave. He says: "This great specific completely cured me, and saved my life. Since then, I have used it for over 10 years and consider it a marvelous throat and lung cure." Strictly scientific cure for Coughs, Sore Throats or Colds; sure preventive of Pneumonia. Guaranteed 50c and $1.00 bottles at Z. Wayne Griffin & Bros., drugstore. Trial bottle free.

Don't be Ashamed of Your Job.

"Yes'm, I'll do your things for you. Seventy-five cents a dozen. Yes'm, I know that's kind of high but I'll do 'em nice. Oh, no'm, I don't mind carrying that sized bundle. Work ain't no disgrace. I'm independent, I am." And smiling and nodding, a woman went cheerfully on her way.

What a fine example she made of self-reliance, courage ability.

The other day I met a shop girl who spent something like half an hour explaining that the store was a fine place to study human nature—had an aesthetic value. Being a saleswoman was most elevating, and that was really why she was doing it.

She meant for me to deduce that she didn't need the money. Of course, I knew she did need it.

The washerwoman's way was the best. She did her work well, took a pride in it, and troubled herself not at all as to whether people thought she was getting elevated.

All the same, she was getting elevated. "There is a dignity in honest toil." It is nothing to apologize for. Poets and great men have sung this in the ears, but many of us do not hear or heed.

The woman who is a lady don't have to spend her time telling you so.

BLIND FOOTBALL TEAM.

Plays By Ear, the Kentucky Lads Put Up a Good Game.

[Louisville Dispatch.]

"A remarkable feature of the work of my boys," said Captain Short, of the football team of the Kentucky Institution for the Education of the Blind, "is the quickness with which they adapt themselves to the use of signals. A clap of the hands, the shouting of an agreed word known only to the blind boys and myself and a countersign or password are the means used to make up for the loss of the players' sight."

"For instance, when the boys get into a tackle or other mixup they have one word which must be spoken whenever there is a come-together. When a blind boy gets his hands on another player he says this word aloud. If the man he has tackled or collided with does not say in a hurry the word agreed upon to fit the password, something is doing."

"All this has to be done in a jiffy and my boys do not waste any time going after their man when he does not say the word to fit the countersign."

There is no "snapping" of the ball but instead it is passed to the blind boy agreed upon by both sides and play begins with him. After this everything as far as the location of the ball goes depends on sound. The moment the ball goes into a man's hands you will see my boys making for that direction almost before the men who can see have learned where the ball is.

"One agreed word will completely stop the play, and the way the boys catch the word and obey it is beautiful. It is like a test alarm of fire in a school."

"With my boys they do not know what is coming, whether they are about to get smashed all to pieces or whether some one else is about to get hurt by their rushes, but they do know that the signal to stop means to stop, and like the true soldiers that they are they stop almost in the middle of a breath, so to speak."

UNDER the headlines of "Smoked Out" and ostensibly discussing an interview with Esq. W. G. Martin which we published in our issue of October 13th and again last week, but really portraying its idiocy and utter disregard for the truth. The Hartford Herald says:

When we read it, we knew he had used only such portions of the interview as he wanted.

Yes and when the people who had, as well as those who had not read the whole interview read your brief quotation from it they knew as we do that you knowingly and willfully attempted to deceive them and conceal the real facts concerning the unheard of methods used in railroad building the contract for the construction of the iron bridges through to the Champion Bridge Co. Again it says:

It took persistent effort on our part to get the editor of THE REPUBLICAN to a point where he would have to give the whole interview.

Here is another sample of its fine spun deception. Of course every one knows that we were not forced to give the whole interview. It was out of a spirit of fairness to Judge Miller whose duty it was to notify the other members of the committee of the time and place of meeting, the other members, the public and every one interested that we gave the whole interview, the Herald's statement to the contrary notwithstanding. We have often been charged by this "measly," penurious paper of practicing chicanery, misrepresentation and deception, but knowing the source of its emanation we have passed it by and went straight along giving the facts about the iron bridge business as we see them.

In 1898 when Judge Miller was trying to sell $30,000 worth of county bonds to procure money to pay off the county's indebtedness he told the companies with whom he negotiated that the entire indebtedness that he found hanging over Ohio county on his advent into office was contracted prior to the adoption of the present constitution of Kentucky which as every one knows was adopted in 1891. If this be true—and no one has ever denied it—it relieves the Republican party entirely of any responsibility for the alleged $35,000 indebtedness, for until 1891, when Judge John P. Morton's term of office began, the Republicans had never before, in the history of Ohio county, had charge of its financial affairs and could not have contracted the alleged $35,000 indebtedness or any indebtedness prior to that time. Now Judge, if you understood in 1898 that the debts of the county were contracted prior to 1891 and see it different now, why not explain what brought upon you the charge. If on the other hand you still understand as you did in 1898 that the county's indebtedness was contracted before the good year of 1891, why are you and your mouthpiece, the Hartford Herald, trying to make it appear that the debt was contracted during Judge Morton's term of office and that the Republican party is responsible for it?

JUDGE MILLER admits in his article "to the voters of Ohio county" published in this week's Hartford Herald that he has collected $81,000 more taxes from the tax-payers of Ohio county during his term of office than was collected during the seven years preceding that date. After deducting $35,000, the highest amount he has ever claimed the county was in debt when he assumed charge, will he or some one for him please State what has been done with the remaining $46,000 of the excess collected?

IF THE Hartford Herald entertained the slightest desire to act fairly with us and the public it would have reproduced the entire interview of Esq. G. W. Martin relative to what notice he had of the meeting of the iron bridge committee, of which Judge Miller is Chairman, which we published in our last issue instead of a few sentences which disconnected from the remainder are rendered unintelligible.

THE secret ballot is one of the mighty safe guards of liberty and should be kept inviolate. The corrupt voter and politician alone would profit by a return to the old way of voting. Voter place your stencil in the small square opposite the "no" on the margin of your ballot November 7th, and help to retain the secret ballot.

HOW DOES Judge Miller's statement that during the late Judge Morton's last year in office (1897) the Republicans then in power not only spent all the revenue for that year but run the county $15,000 in debt look by the side of his statement in 1898 that all the indebtedness of the county was contracted before 1891?

IF HE had cared to give a bit of information of interest to the public Judge Miller might have explained in his "Facts and Figures" why he did not notify M. S. Ragland of the time and place of meeting of the iron bridge construction committees as he agreed to do.

COUNTY finances and iron bridge building seem to be the slogan of the democratic contingent running for office in Ohio county. How about third term and one man power?

CAN any one guess why J. D. Wysong, Representative of the Champion Bridge Company, visited Democratic headquarters while in Hartford last week?

PICKPOCKETS AND CROWDS

Detective Tells Reporter of Methods Which Crooks Use in "Trimming Victims" at Fair.

"Several people who went to the fair recently held at Rockville, Md., came away with less than they took there," remarked a detective to a Washington Star reporter. "I do not mean that they spent their money or threw it away, but that they happened to meet people who 'trimmed' them. Such is the experience of many people who attend county fairs now, for there are crooks who find such places more profitable than they do the larger gatherings. As a rule people who attend such places seldom give crooks a thought, and those who have diamonds and other expensive jewelry wear them. During recent years pickpockets and other crooks have not fared so well at the big gatherings in this country, and many of those who attempted to work in the cities have been apprehended and put away. It is not an easy matter for a crook to conceal his identity in these days of improved methods. They realize that when placed under arrest in a small town or country places the chances of their getting away are better. In the larger cities the records are handy, and the giving of a fictitious name is of but little assistance to the prisoner if he has ever been arrested before.

"There is scarcely a day that the authorities of other cities do not ask the bureau of identification for information respecting criminals," the detective said, "and Maj. Sylvester manages to furnish identifications in a large number of cases. It is not a difficult matter to trace such persons when the measurements have been obtained, and it is always surprising to the prisoner when he has been identified in this way. I remember a case of a man who was arrested in this city several years ago and held on suspicion that he had been implicated in a case involving the taking of a watch from a visitor in the city. He was on his way home from a country fair and had been arrested at the fair. Nothing was found upon him, however, and he was released. He had been seen to take a pocketbook from the pocket of a visitor to the fair, but had not been seen when he passed it to a confederate. Had the people in the country known of his record they would not have paid any attention to his pretended indignation and released him.

"Some of the smaller towns are now represented in the bureau of criminal identification," added the detective, "and even in the smaller places the professional thief finds it more difficult to operate and get away than he did some years ago."

SHOOTING AFRICAN BABOON

Traveler Writes of Methods Upon Which This Unique Style of Hunt Is Conducted.

A traveler writing from South Africa to the Chicago Daily News describes a baboon hunt as follows: "Very slowly we spread out round about the base of the kopje and began a scrawling ascent through the thick scrub. Kaffirs and farmers together, we formed something of a loose circle round the kopje. Daylight found us drawing near the higher spurs of the kopje and the Kaffirs were busy beating. Then the sport began and pretty meanly it was. A good many baboons broke through our circle, for we only mustered seven guns, but as we neared the top of the kopje I could tell by the noises all about me that some execution was being done. My first kill gave me a most uncomfortable thrill. It was horribly like picking off a man. The baboons were great big, human looking brutes, quite capable of picking up a lamb in their hands and running off with it. (As a fact, they generally content themselves with ripping the beast open to get the curdled milk within.) But their cries were the most horrible thing about them and the gestures of their waving arms. When we all met a careful count was made. Thirty baboons had been bagged. Seven had fallen to my gun."

MINNESOTA INTERLAKEN.

Writer Elucidates Upon Beauties of This State—Is Center of Reservoir System.

Now, the stated newspaper summer correspondent, turned loose to grass, is always enthusiastic, asserts Charles Hallock, in Recreation. His descriptions of rural haunts are therefore subject to mortification. They are always heartiest when they effervesce. But I am no four-year old colt just out of harness. I have looked the entire continent almost over, and am free to say that for a country devoid of mountain features and partaking purely of the pastoral, I have found none to equal middle Minnesota in beauty and ever-changing variety; and it is practically unlimited. The very contour of the land makes this possible. Consider, if you please, that this is the center of the great reservoir system which supplies some of the principal rivers of the continent. Here on this crowning watershed the Mississippi and the Red River of the North have their sources, so close together and so near akin by birth and association that the deities of the woods have always marveled why they turned their backs to each other and took opposite directions, one to the freezing Arctic and the other to the tepid South Atlantic. In this sylvan nursery of streams, in the very cradle of these diverse temperaments and erratic moods we find a congregation of catch basins, lakes and feeders, so numerous that they are hardly named or numbered. They seem the very counterpart of the galaxy across the sky. There are lakes of every conceivable conformation and outline; round lakes with pebbly shores, oblong lakes margined with wild rice and reeds, lakes with deeply indented bays and projecting points, lakes with shores wooded to the brink, and lakes set in shrubless areas of lawn, lakes filled with islands, lakes with flat shores, bold shores, sloping shores, craggy shores, and lakes with confronting bluffs and promontories. There are lakes detached and isolated, lakes in clusters and pairs, lakes large as seas, and lakes in connecting chains which stretch far across the prairie and furnish uninterrupted thoroughfares for boats for distances of a hundred miles.

USE OF STEAMER LETTERS

Are Written to Friends When They Are Going Abroad—One Girl Pleased.

"Don't you know what a steamer letter is?" said a young man to a writer for the Philadelphia Bulletin. "Well, if you know a girl who is going abroad, and if you want to get on her right side, send her a steamer letter according to this prescription: 'Write as many letters as there are to be days in the voyage, seal and number each letter, and inclose all in one big envelope, addressed to the ship, so as to reach her on the morning of her sailing.'

"She will read one letter a day during the voyage. She will find in each something pleasant and appropriate—maybe some small gift.

"I once sent a girl a most elaborate steamer letter. It was in charge of the chief steward. He handed its installment to her each morning when she came up and took her deck chair.

"The first day's installment lay in a five-pound box of candy. The second day's was hidden in the heart of a bouquet of orchids. The third day's was tied to a basket of fruit. The fourth day's lay between the leaves of an interesting novel. The fifth day's was in another box of candy. The sixth day's was in a guide book to Europe. The seventh day's was attached to two tickets for the best show in London.

"It cost me a pretty penny to arrange such a steamer letter as this with the chief steward, but the girl was simply tickled to death."

WINE FROM THE PINEAPPLE

Delicious Beverage Is Yielded from This Fruit—Much Resembles Rhine Wine.

A new way has been found for utilizing pineapples, which are such a "cheap" and plentiful crop in regions adapted to their cultivation that the discovery of a hitherto unknown method of turning them to account commercially is worth noting.

The fruit, it has been ascertained, can be made to yield a very delicious wine, much resembling Rhine wine in bouquet, delicacy of flavor and appearance. It was in Brazil that pineapples were first employed in this way not long ago, but recently an attempt was made to manufacture the beverage on a large scale in Havana. For some reason unexplained the effort resulted in failure, but presumably the process was incorrect. Persons who have tasted pineapple wine properly made have pronounced it exquisite.

The process required is somewhat elaborate. To begin with, the rinds of the pineapples are removed, and the pulp, after being cut into small pieces, is squeezed in the hands or in some suitable apparatus. Four average "pines" ought to yield about one quart of juice. The latter is filtered through cheesecloth and poured into a little cask with a stopcock. Then a small quantity of bisulfite of lime is added, to clear the "must," which, when this has been accomplished, is decanted into a fresh cask. The fermentation which follows lasts for several days, after which the liquid is bottled; but there are various essential details not describable in such limited space.

It is thought that pineapple wine may become an important commercial product in the not distant future. The fruit has gained vastly in popularity within the last few years and great quantities of its pulp are now being put up with sugar for market in a form that is relatively imperishable, being available at any time for consumption and retaining the fresh flavor.

In the southern states pineapples are being raised in a novel fashion under a lattice work of laths. The roof of laths is about eight feet from the ground (so that cultivation may be conducted comfortably beneath it) and in some cases cover many acres. In this manner a partial shade is given, protecting the plants from the fiercest rays of the sun. When frost threatens the lattice work again serves as a defense, interfering with the radiation of heat from the earth beneath and thus safeguarding the crop.

The pineapple plant yields a valuable fiber which in the Philippines is woven into the famous "pina" cloth—the most delicate of known fabrics. It is very beautiful and a shawl made of it will actually float in the air when tossed up. Some day, doubtless, we shall learn how to manufacture "pina" in this country.

The Pope's Golden Rose.

The Golden Rose, which the pope may bestow upon Roman Catholic princesses for "virtue," is estimated to be worth over $2,000. The stem of the rose is of solid gold, while the cup of the flower is of the most delicate workmanship and is set with magnificent precious stones. The leaves are similarly set with small gems in resemblance of dewdrops. The whole work of art lies in a magnificent case of white satin, mounted with silver studs.

AN ENGAGED MAN'S ROOMS

Glance at Apartments of a Lover Tells Much—Books and Distinctive Air Pervades.

"Did you ever take particular notice of the apartments of the young fellow who is engaged to be married, or else very much in love?" asked the old bachelor. "Before we go any further allow me to explain that I have no intention of saying that the man who is engaged to the 'sweetest girl in the world' is not very much in love," says a writer in the New Orleans Times-Democrat. "Of course, there is a certain difference between the accepted and the uncertain suitor.

"The love of a man who has put his fate to the test, and found it not wanting, is of that quiet, restful sort; not at all like the man who is on pins and needles continually because, forsooth, he cannot answer the question: 'She loves me, she loves me not?' But to return to my original proposition. The rooms of this man always have a distinctive air that gives him away on the instant. Take his library, for instance. The table holds half a dozen books that are filled with markers. A glance at the titles is sufficient: 'Love Poems,' 'The Old, Old Story,' 'The Ballads of a Joyous Lover,' and so on and so forth. His desk contains several letters addressed in a feminine hand, a gorgeous penwiper—a thing almost unknown to the loveless youth—countless trinkets that show the handiwork of feminine hands, and last, but not least, a photograph of a girl in a heavy gold frame reposes on the polished surface.

"Over on the wall you will find a much larger frame containing a photograph of the same damsel, and perhaps a dozen or more Kodak prints representing the girl in as many different poses. Here and there hang bits of ribbon, odd and dainty gloves, and often a stray wisp of a handkerchief.

"The same air pervades all the other rooms of his dwelling. Photographs, pillows, handkerchief boxes, various useful ornaments that a man would never have thought of in the world. The whole place has the atmosphere of a shrine, where a man continually worships the one girl. After he gets married? Well, that is a different proposition."

Mexico's Presidents.

In 59 years Mexico had 52 presidents, dictators and emperors before the time of President Diaz. Cecil Rhodes did not believe in the stability of the country. "There is no guaranty," he said, "that after President Diaz dies Mexico will have any better government than that which prevails in the South American countries."

Both Legs Barred.

A Wellington boy who was drilling a class of playmates found difficulty in getting them to march properly. "Lift your right leg!" he called. "Lift your right leg!" Things went very well until Patsy Hennessy forgot and lifted his left leg, which happened to be clad in trousers like those of the boy next him, who was obedient in holding up his right leg. The drillmaster stopped aghast. "You can't do that, Pat Hennessy!" he called. "You're holding up both legs."—Wellington (Kan.) Mail.

OUR NEW YORK WEEKLY LETTER

Window Displays a Part of the Life. Waists, Practical and Dressy, in Tempting Styles—Saxony Flannel and Embroidered Cashmeres.

By RENE DEVERAUX.

At any rate the old time idea that to stand in front of a shop window and gaze at its contents was a mark of provincialism no longer applies to "little old New York." Certainly here old New Yorkers and the stranger within her gates gather together to look and admire. This is not to be wondered at, however, for in no other city in the world is there to be seen in the windows a more artistic arrangement of fashionable apparel.

This season seems to excel any previous one in its charming variety of individual waists, a fashion too practical to be easily superseded. Moreover, waists a trifle warmer than those of the thinnest lingerie materials are beginning to feel comfortable these crisp, cool mornings.

Exclusive waist houses and waist departments of department stores have ready made and are making to order practical shirt waists of Saxony flannel that launder as well as cotton fabrics. Some of the smartest of these are in small stripes and checks on a white background fastened with medium sized pearl buttons down the front and finished with a stitched pocket on the upper left side.

Cashmere, henrietta and nun's veiling in soft pastel shades are again enormously popular. These are daintily trimmed with lace inserting or bit of hand embroidery, and the expert needlewoman who so desires may buy a plainly fashioned waist, adding the little smart touches in the way of hand work.

An exceedingly effective waist, and, by the way, quite inexpensive, was made of white nun's veiling with bunches of tucks both back and front. Between the tucks on either side were small hand embroidered stars in a pretty shade of blue. The cuffs were deep and finely tucked, and a tucked stock with a soft blue silk tie added a becoming finish.

The fashion of buttoning the waist down the back, which seems more popular than ever, admits of many charming ways of trimming which would otherwise be impossible. This fact was demonstrated in a dressy white taffeta waist whose charm was its novel trimming. This consisted of a tiny little square in front formed of rows of lace inserting around which and turned at the corners were bias pieces of the silk attached successively in four rows, each piped with a suggestion of soft blue taffeta. This square yoke effect extended well down to the bust line in front, giving a quite broad shouldered effect, and terminated in the back in a short square yoke. The sleeves were made with plain deep cuffs finished at the top with two corresponding bias pieces piped with blue.

PET AND HOODOO NUMBERS

Men Have Likings and Aversions for Certain Digits They See in Coming and Going.

Many people have favorite numbers. One man who does much traveling likes 5 above all others. Every time his train stops at a station he looks out eagerly to see if there is a freight car or two about bearing a number with the digit 5 in it. If the 5 happens to be the last figure in the number he is particularly pleased and should the number be made up entirely of 5's his happiness lasts for days at a time. Whenever he sees one of his favorite numbers out of the window he timidly closes his eyes for fear that the next number will contain no 5's.

Another man who has a chronic case of numeral fever is distressed for blocks after he sees a No. 13 or a number the sum of whose digits is 13. The pain of 49, 67, 85, 139, 148, 157, 166, 175 is just as great as that of plain 13, and, going by familiar houses on the street cars, he learns not to look up them if they bear figures that bring gloomy 13 into his mind.

This mathematician is as eager to find certain kinds of figures as he is anxious to avoid certain others. Any number the sum of whose digits can be evenly divided by the number of those digits will give him not a little pleasure. For instance, 345 will send a thrill of delight through the amateur mathematician. The sum of the digits is 12, and that divided by the number of digits, 3, leaves the even number 4.

Of course, the larger the number the less chance there is for success in the little game, and therefore, the serious-minded man who plays it avoids so far as possible long streets where there are many digits. If he must travel along such a route he takes a look at several numbers out of the corner of his eye, and after he has found one that satisfies the test he follows the custom of the out-of-town freight car enumerator and tries his best to see no more numbers of any kind for the rest of his journey.

Another citizen is compelled to keep track of the steps he takes in crossing streets from curb to curb. His chief object is to cover the intervening distance in 1, 5, 9, 13 or any other number of steps that is based on the principle underlying all these. In his youth he learned to count things in fours, using these words instead of numbers in the process: "Silk, satin, calico, rags," and repeating them, if necessary, over and over again.

They survive now that he is over 30 in only one form, and that is street-crossing. He will take small steps or steps large enough to strain a tendon in his leg, he will run the risk of being run over by a street car or an automobile, all for the sake of arriving at the other curb in "silk" or "satin." Now and then, when he is in a great hurry or is walking with some dignified friend, he is obliged to reach a sidewalk in "rags." For several minutes afterward he is no fit companion; life seems to him to be one black failure.

An Inspired Idiot.

Reuben Fields, the Johnson county mathematician, who is considered by many to be an idiotic wonder, stopped at a hotel in a small town in Henry county recently. As usual in such places, there were a number of drummers on hand; there was also a meeting of some medical men at the place who used the hotel as headquarters. One of the doctors thought it would be quite a joke to tell Fields that some of the M. D.'s had concluded to kidnap him and take out his brains to learn how it was he was so good in mathematics. He was then asked by them what he was going to do about it. Fields replied: "I will go on without brains, just like you doctors are doing."—Oak Grove (Mo.) Banner.
